GOATERY SCHEME
Assistance for Goat Rearing

Introduction.— Goats play an important role in the rural economy at national level. More than 70 percent of the landless agricultural labourers, marginal and small farmers of rural India rear them. The socio-economic value of goat rearing as compared to other livestock species has been immense for the poor farmers. Goats are the most potential source of meat production with minimum housing requirements. Goats can sustain on sparse vegetation and extreme climatic conditions. They are more efficient feed converters. Apart from providing meat, it is also a source of high quality milk, manure and hide. Goat farming will provide employment opportunities to unemployed rural youths and farmers thereby providing supplementary income to improve their living standards. The advantages of the goat farming are:

1. They are prolific breeders with shorter generation interval.

2. A goat can be bred as early as 8-9 months of age and can kid twice in a year. They produce 1-2 kids in each kidding.

3. Goat farming requires low initial investment on setting up the unit.

4. Goat meat (chevon) is most nutritious with low fat and has better energy value. The dressing percentage in goats is around 50%.

5. The meat is generally acceptable, delicious and of higher demand which is consumed by all communities in India and has no religious taboo.

6. Goat’s milk being alkaline has medicinal value & hence recommended for patients with peptic ulcers, allergic eczemas, jaundice, acidosis and insomnia. It also contains high phosphates which can supplement the phosphorus deficient vegetarian diet. Goat milk contains selenium, an essential trace mineral that supports the immune system.

7. Goat manure is widely used as fertilizer for agriculture farms and gardens.

8. Goat farming provides quick returns since the marketable weight of goat can be achieved within a period of 12 months.

9. There is good demand from domestic as well as export market for goat meat.
