PREFACE

A Public Private Partnership (PPP) is a long term collaboration between a government agency and a private partner. The objective of a PPP is providing the public with an asset or service by utilizing the strengths of the parties involved. In a PPP the managerial and financial responsibility usually lies with the private partner. This allows the government to optimally deploy its scarce financial resources in other non PPP projects. In a PPP the private partner provides the sectorial expertise and financial strength. The government provides help in policy making, planning and regulation. The risks and duties in a PPP project are assigned, according to which party will be able to best manage them. The Private partner also has the exclusive right to collect revenue from project assets in the form of user fees. Hence the revenue generated from a successful PPP project depends largely on the performance of the private partner.

A Public Private Partnership provides the government a unique and innovative mechanism to execute / procure, infrastructure assets / services. This allows for accelerated development of high quality infrastructure assets and services. As a result employment opportunities are created in the associated sectors. This in turn leads to economic development in the region. A Public Private Partnership allows the private partner to contribute in nation building by creating public infrastructure assets or providing services for public betterment.

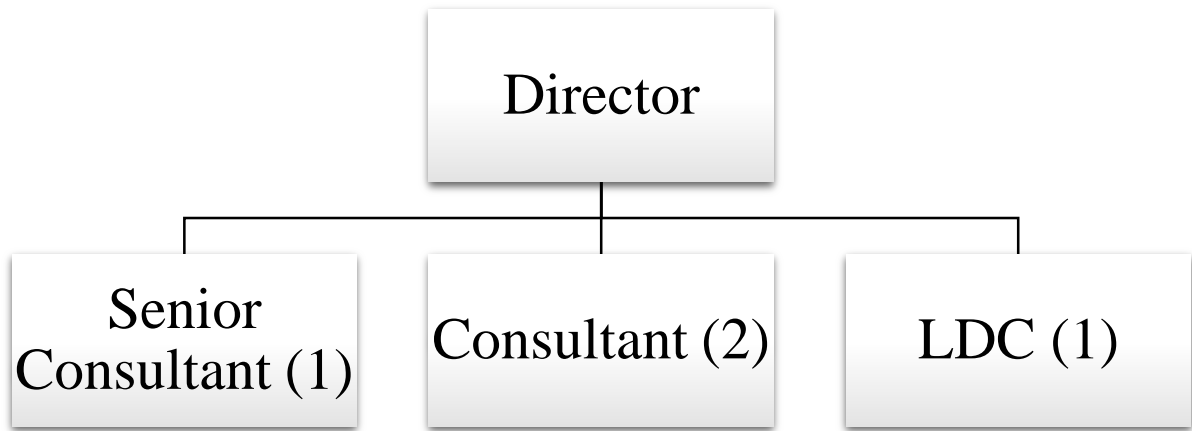

The success of the long term development objectives of a PPP project involves meticulous planning and analysis. This starts with the selection of a financially sound and experienced partner. The roles and risks should be carefully allotted among the parties involved. The legal and institutional framework in the state should be conducive for PPP projects. Robust project monitoring mechanisms should be put in place for PPP projects. This also greatly influences long term project continuity and success. A well-crafted PPP agreement considers all of the above factors and clearly defines the risks and responsibilities for all the parties involved.

The Government of Goa (Government) intends to fast track infrastructure development in the state via PPP mode. The Department of Public Private Partnership (DPPP) was created vide Cabinet decision dated 7th July 2021.
