2. While on the Beach - Beach Safety Patrol (Do s & Don ts)

- The lives of tourists are very precious to Goa Tourism Development Corporation. While most beaches in Goa are safe during fair weather, it is very important to follow certain rules before entering the sea.
- Locate the lifeguard on duty, consult him and then enter into the sea. Beaches that are safe on one day can be extremely treacherous on another, due to changing tidal activity.
- Always keep one person from your group on the shore to act as a lookout. He will be able to call upon the life guard should you need assistance.
- If there are no lifeguards or warning boards at a beach, consider it dangerous and do not enter.
- Entering into seawater after consumption of alcohol is highly dangerous and almost suicidal.
- Swimming in deep waters is not advisable, even for accomplished swimmers. If you do not know to swim or have not experienced swimming in the sea, do not venture beyond the depth recommended by the Lifeguard.
- Tourists visiting beaches are requested to read the Caution Boards erected at the main entrance of the beach and to follow the instructions on them.
- Bathing / Swimming in the sea during monsoons is prohibited. It is extremely dangerous and may lead to death by drowning. Even trying to stand in ankle deep waters during monsoons is dangerous as the undercurrents can sweep you off your feet and drag you into deep waters. Monsoon season normally starts around 1st June and ends around 30th September.
