The Goa Forest Development Corporation has announced development of a new ecotourism campsite at the scenic Surla Forest. This initiative aims to boost sustainable tourism while conserving the region's rich biodiversity and promoting eco-friendly travel experiences for locals and visitors alike.

Located in the lush Western Ghats, the Surla Forest is renowned for its dense greenery, diverse flora and fauna, and tranquil environment. The ecotourism campsite will offer a unique opportunity for visitors to experience the untouched beauty of the forest, all while maintaining a minimal environmental footprint.

The Key Features of the Surla Forest Ecotourism Campsite includes Eco-Friendly Accommodation, Nature Trails and Trekking, Bird Watching, Local Community Involvement: and Conservation Education.

The Managing Director of Goa Forest Development Corporation emphasized the importance of sustainable development in the region. "We are excited to introduce the Surla Forest Ecotourism Campsite as a model of responsible tourism. This initiative not only aims to provide visitors with an authentic experience of Goa's natural beauty but also underscores our commitment to conserving our rich biodiversity.

The ecotourism project at Surla Forest is aligned with the Government of Goa's vision of promoting sustainable tourism and protecting the state's unique natural heritage.
